

European Meeting of Statisticians Palermo 22-26 July 2019

The European Meeting of Statisticians (EMS), sponsored by the European Regional Committee of the Bernoulli Society, is the main statistics and probability theory conference in Europe. EMS is a conference where statisticians of all ages and from all regions meet to exchange ideas and talk about the newest developments on the broad field of statistics and probability theory. The conference is organized every other year. The very first EMS meeting was held in Dublin in 1962, and the 32nd EMS - EMS 2019 - will take place in Palermo, the capital of Sicily (Italy).

Palermo is a city rich in monuments testifying its centuries-old history, such as Palazzo dei Normanni, the oldest Royal residence in Europe with the famous Cappella Palatina; the Cathedral; the Martorana Church of Arabic style; the Massimo Theatre, the largest opera house in Italy. Palermo is also known for its beautiful beach and its traditional food. It is well connected by plane with the main European cities. From the airport is very easy to reach the city by train or by bus. Palermo has different accommodation possibilities in different price ranges.

Venue and dates

The conference will be held at the beautiful campus of the University of Palermo, which is located very close to the center of Palermo. The conference will start on Monday 22.7.2019 and it will end on Friday 26.7.2019.
